FOREWORD

Mr. George J. Bauer's collection of Greek Coins is probably the best known in this country. He must have started it some fifty years ago when really fine material was still available. His exquisite taste and his sense for highest quality enabled him to assemble a collection which ranks amongst the finest ever offered for sale. Mr. Bauer shared his enthusiasm with the American coin-collecting fraternity by exhibiting his coins at practically every important Convention, and many honors were heaped upon him on such occasions. Influenced by the late Mr. Edward T. Newell the collection is particularly strong in coins from Magna Graecia, and especially Syracuse, Greece proper, Alexander the Great and the Diadochi. For many years it was my desire to offer this outstanding material at an auction, and now this becomes true!

The anonymity of the consignor of the Byzantine Coins has to be respected. The quality and rarity, especially in the coinage of the Isaurian and Macedonian Dynasties, speaks for its importance.

For quite a number of years I was liquidating the collection of my old friend, Dr. Kurt M. Semon, of New York, formerly of Frankfurt a.M. After his untimely death it was arranged with the executor to offer the balance of the collection in an auction for final liquidation. Even these few remaining pieces render testimony for his discriminating taste and his sense of beauty. His greatest love was the Hadrian Medallion which remained on his desk until he closed his eyes forever.

- Miss Gisela M. A. Richter, in her recent article on "Calenian Pottery and Classical Greek Metalware" publ. in AJA vol. 63, No. 3 (July 1959), stresses the importance of the great masters of diesinking. "It is natural to think that such men as Kimon and Euainetos did not restrict their activities to the making of coins, but produced also reliefs on metalware. In other words . . . the two crafts were sometimes practised by the same artists." As the title of the article implies, their work influenced other crafts throughout Magna Graecia for centuries. Numerous illustrations show these popular coins; such as the types of our Nos. 27, 75, 109, 122, 140, 196 and others.
